ABOUT ME

I have always been a curious and enthusiastic individual. As an economics major, I have always been curious about how I can integrate IT with my day to day activities and improve the overall productivity, process, and efficiency of how I do my work. I started out with small scripts to help automate my work, and then eventually made my way to creating small applications to help my colleagues as well. I am eager to create functional web applications in order to improve daily systematic activities. On the creative side, I am a freelance graphic designer which I know would benefit the designing of my web applications as well. I have been always known as a team player because of my coordinated effort with my colleagues in order to meet team goals.
