ABOUT ME

I have always been a curious and enthusiastic individual. As an economics major, I have always been curious how I can integrate IT with my day to day activities and improve the overall productivity, process, and efficiency of how I do my work. I started out with small scripts to help automate my work, and then eventually made my way to creating small applications to help my colleagues as well. I'm eager to create functional web applications in order to improve daily systematic activities. On the creative side, I'm a freelance graphic designer which I know would benefit the designing of my web apps as well. I'm also inclined into current events as well as participating in several sports such as basketball, swimming, etc. I've always been a team player when it comes to my previous work since I don't want any of my colleagues to be left behind of the task at hand.
